February is Teen Dating Violence Awareness Month

Rice Lake, WI - Every February, people across the United States join together for a national effort to bring awareness to teen dating violence. Teen Dating Violence Awareness Month (TDVAM) is a critical opportunity to let people know that while teen dating violence does happen, it can be prevented through ongoing conversation. This year's theme is "Be About It". "Be About It" is a continuation of last year's theme, "Talk About It." This year during TDVAM, we're unapologetically about education, engagement, and empowerment, and we're here to amplify the voices of teens and young adults, and those who support them, by uplifting positive, healthy, and safe relationships. Join us as we magnify our young people's voices and highlight the issues teens face related to healthy relationships. Whether offering support, relationship education, or connecting someone to resources, "Be About It" calls on us all to create a world free from relationship abuse.

Conversations about healthy and unhealthy relationships are not only important to have at home but also in schools and public locations where teenagers often gather. A safe adult who could start these conversations may be a parent, teacher, coach, community member, or another adult who wants to help prevent teen dating violence. A focus on educating teens properly can reduce the rate of teen dating violence across the country by promoting healthy behaviors and stopping violence before it begins. Conversations about safe teen dating should involve identifying what is important in a relationship, including trust, respect, and how to give consent. By giving teens the appropriate tools to be successful in their relationships, identify red flags, and use effective communication, we are creating a positive and safe future for them and others.

LGBTQIA+ youth are more likely to experience virtual, physical, emotional, and sexual violence. For example, 43% of LGBT youth have reported being survivors of physical dating violence in comparison to 29% of heterosexual youth. 1 in 2 trans and nonbinary people will experience an abusive relationship. Youth may experience negative feedback from peers, educators, family, and society due to sexual orientation or gender identity. This creates an unsafe feeling for youth in all aspects of life, including school. A school's positive emotional message and climate toward LGBTQIA+ youth is an important factor in mitigating bullying and other victimization tactics. Everyone, regardless of gender, sexual orientation, or gender expression deserves a safe and healthy relationship.

1 in 3 teenagers will experience physical, sexual, or emotional abuse before adulthood, and that statistic is based on reported cases. Only 33% of teens who have experienced violence have ever told anyone. Some teenagers may have a lack of confidence or even a fear of what will happen if they tell or question their relationship. It is not always possible for an adult to recognize dating violence, even if they are well informed on the warning signs to watch for. A teenager may be dating someone who behaves differently around parents and educators, making it more difficult to identify. This is why it's important for teens to learn warning signs or "red flags" of an unhealthy relationship themselves, so they can identify and put an end to them.

Final Performances of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

Barron, WI (for immediate release) – The first weekend of shows of Barron Spotlighters performances of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" went very well and the final shows will be happening this coming February 3-5. Advance tickets are still available for any of these three remaining shows through their website: www.barronspotlighters.org.

The first weekend of shows were extremely well received, and opening night received a standing ovation from many in the audience. Comments from those in attendance this past weekend included: "...everyone did a great job. It was a good show." Another commenter on Facebook said: "Bravo for taking on this show!" Don't miss out on your opportunity to see this award-winning drama for the final weekend of performances.

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" is a well-known drama that won a Tony award for Best Play in 1963, as well as Best Actor and Best Actress Tony's in the same year. It was adapted into a movie in 1966 starring Elizabeth Taylor as Martha. The play provides a wealth of tension, both between the couples on stage as well as between the actors and the audience. It is a great study in the psychology of relationships of all kinds.
