Rice Lake Man...

ignition interlock device installed the following day.

Another officer with the Rice Lake Police Department, also on scene, searched the vehicle and found a glass bubble pipe with white residue in the center console. The sergeant also observed a gem bag that later tested positive for methamphetamine and a ziploc bag with a substance that later tested as a 1.4-gram rock of methamphetamine.

The criminal complaint goes on to say that the sergeant reported that when he first walked up to the vehicle, he didn't see the AK-47 style rifle in the backseat because of heavy window tinting, but found it when searching the vehicle. The magazine was loaded with 32 rounds of ammunition, as well as a live round in the chamber. He also found a camouflage armor vest with two loaded magazines, all on the driver's side back seat.

The sergeant also found a large, red, round tube, sealed at both ends, with a fuse in the driver's door pocket. The tube was partially hidden by other items.

An investigator, with the Rice Lake Police Department also joined the sergeant and the officer. The investigator reported that he located a container of suspected Tannerite that had black tape wrapped around it, also in the backseat.

The investigator contacted the Marathon County Bomb Squad who took custody of the explosive.

While being interviewed, Faas said that he had owned that rifle for about eight months and that he and the passenger had gone shooting earlier that morning. He described the explosive as "just a little firecracker" and said that he had grabbed it from someone else's house when he was leaving their house. He also said that the person he took it from, or their friend, had made it. He admitted several times to possessing the device.

When Faas was asked about the Tannerite, Faas said that he taped it up to make it look like a bomb. The Marathon Bomb Squad indicated a powder substance was inside the device. The team determined that it was likely that the bomb would detonate if the fuse was lit. The device was taken in for further investigation.

Faas is scheduled to appear in court on December 20, 2023.
